

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A time series monitoring system, implemented in software, executes persistent queries on multiple input time series, handling high data throughput with low response time. The system supports dynamic management of time series, of windows in time series, and of persistent queries. Also, the system can use historical values in present windows to help populate inserted windows.